Spectrum Sports International has installed a unique climbing wall at the new Pinstack bowling and family entertainment center in Plano, Texas. The climbing wall features six routes with various slope angles to accommodate many skill levels. Auto-belays reduce operating costs and add a layer of safety. The climbing wall was built over the space of six days using 72 fiberglass modular panels and a custom steel frame.

There are RGB LED handholds, an impressive climbing surface that is 48 feet wide by 24 feet high, six climbing routes and timers at the Spectrum Sports International Pinstack climbing wall installation.

Most notably, the climbing wall boasts RGB LED climbing handholds. Pinstack can set each climbing route to a desired color or choose one of several preset programs. A control box is conveniently located inside the service door. The climbing handholds are a proprietary design that Spectrum Sports International developed over three months, and this is the first project to take advantage of the convenient plug-n-play handhold option.
